Anti Racism Training for Teachers: Empowering Educators to Foster Inclusive Classrooms

anti racism training for teachers has become an essential component in modern education, aiming to equip educators with the awareness, skills, and tools to recognize and dismantle systemic racism in schools. As classrooms become increasingly diverse, the role of teachers extends beyond traditional subject instruction to shaping inclusive environments where every student feels valued and supported. This article explores why anti racism training is vital for teachers, what it entails, and how it can transform educational experiences for both educators and students alike.

Why Anti Racism Training for Teachers Matters

In recent years, conversations about racial equity and social justice have gained momentum, highlighting the persistent disparities and biases present in educational settings. Teachers, as frontline influencers in a child's learning journey, hold immense power in either perpetuating or challenging these inequities. Anti racism training for teachers is designed to confront implicit biases, systemic barriers, and discriminatory practices that may unknowingly affect their teaching methods and interactions with students.

When teachers engage in this kind of professional development, they become more conscious of how race and privilege impact student achievement, discipline, and engagement. This awareness is the first step toward creating a classroom climate that actively promotes equity rather than merely tolerating diversity. Moreover, educators who have undergone anti racism training are better prepared to facilitate difficult conversations about race, history, and social justice, which are crucial for nurturing critical thinking and empathy among students.

Core Components of Anti Racism Training for Teachers

Anti racism training is not a one-size-fits-all solution. It typically involves multiple layers of learning and reflection that encourage teachers to examine their own identities, biases, and roles in the educational system.

Understanding Systemic Racism and Its Impact

A foundational part of the training is helping teachers grasp how systemic racism operates within schools. This includes exploring how policies, curricula, and disciplinary practices may disproportionately affect students of color. For example, understanding the school-to-prison pipeline or disparities in advanced course enrollment can shed light on structural inequities that need to be addressed.

Recognizing and Challenging Implicit Bias

Implicit biases are unconscious attitudes or stereotypes that influence behavior and decisions. Anti racism training often includes exercises and discussions that help teachers identify their own biases. By becoming aware, educators can actively work to mitigate these biases in their teaching practices, grading, and student interactions.

Developing Culturally Responsive Teaching Strategies

One practical aspect of anti racism training focuses on equipping teachers with culturally responsive pedagogy. This means incorporating diverse perspectives into lesson plans, using inclusive language, and valuing students' cultural backgrounds as assets in the learning process. It also involves creating teaching methods that recognize different learning styles and experiences, promoting equity in participation and achievement.

Facilitating Open Dialogue and Conflict Resolution

Teachers often face challenging situations involving racial tension or discrimination among students. Anti racism training prepares educators to navigate these moments constructively, fostering open dialogue and teaching students how to engage respectfully with differences. This skill is vital for cultivating a safe and supportive school community.

Benefits of Anti Racism Training for Teachers and Students

The ripple effects of anti racism training extend far beyond the individual teacher. When educators commit to this ongoing process, the entire school ecosystem can experience positive change.

- Improved Student Outcomes: Students who feel seen and understood are more likely to engage in learning and demonstrate higher academic achievement.
- Reduced Disciplinary Disparities: Teachers trained to recognize bias are less likely to disproportionately discipline students of color, contributing to fairer school climates.

- Enhanced Teacher Confidence: Educators gain confidence in addressing sensitive topics and managing classroom dynamics related to race and identity.
- Promotion of Social Justice Values: Schools become spaces where equity and inclusion are actively promoted, preparing students to become empathetic and informed citizens.

Implementing Anti Racism Training in Schools

While the importance of anti racism training for teachers is clear, effective implementation requires thoughtful planning and commitment from school leadership.

Ongoing Professional Development

One-off workshops are insufficient for lasting change. Schools should embed anti racism training into continuous professional development programs, allowing teachers to revisit concepts, reflect on experiences, and apply new strategies throughout the academic year.

Collaborative Learning Communities

Creating spaces where teachers can share challenges, successes, and resources helps sustain momentum. Peer discussions and coaching provide accountability and encourage collective growth in anti racist practices.

Involving the Whole School Community

Anti racism efforts are most effective when supported by administrators, counselors, parents, and students themselves. Engaging the entire school community fosters a shared commitment to equity and helps dismantle systemic barriers beyond the classroom.

Utilizing Expert Resources and Partnerships

Many organizations and consultants specialize in anti racism education and can offer tailored training sessions, curriculum audits, and ongoing support. Partnering with these experts ensures training is grounded in current research and best practices.

Tips for Teachers Engaging in Anti Racism Training

Personal commitment is key to making the most of anti racism training. Here are some practical tips for educators:

1. Approach with Openness: Be willing to confront uncomfortable truths about biases and systemic inequities.
2. Reflect Regularly: Take time to journal or discuss how training insights apply to your classroom practices.
3. Seek Diverse Perspectives: Read books, watch documentaries, and engage with voices from different racial and cultural backgrounds.
4. Practice Active Listening: When discussing race-related topics, listen deeply to students and colleagues without defensiveness.
5. Apply Incremental Changes: Start by incorporating small, consistent changes in your teaching to build toward larger transformation.

Anti racism training for teachers is more than a professional requirement—it's a crucial journey toward equity, understanding, and justice in education. By embracing this work, teachers not only enhance their own skills but also create classrooms where every student has the opportunity to thrive. As society continues to evolve, educators who commit to anti racism principles will play a pivotal role in shaping a more inclusive and compassionate future.

Frequently Asked Questions

What is anti-racism training for teachers?

Anti-racism training for teachers is professional development focused on helping educators recognize, understand, and challenge racism within themselves, their classrooms, and the broader school system to create an inclusive and equitable learning environment.

Why is anti-racism training important for teachers?

Anti-racism training is important for teachers because it equips them with the knowledge and skills to address racial biases, promote equity, and foster a safe and supportive space for students of all backgrounds.

What topics are typically covered in anti-racism training for teachers?

Typical topics include understanding systemic racism, recognizing implicit bias, culturally responsive teaching, anti-racist curriculum development, and strategies for creating inclusive classrooms.

How can anti-racism training impact student outcomes?

Anti-racism training can improve student outcomes by reducing discriminatory practices, increasing cultural awareness, promoting equity, and supporting the academic and social-emotional growth of marginalized students.

Are there specific anti-racism training programs recommended for teachers?

Yes, some well-regarded programs include the Learning for Justice (formerly Teaching Tolerance) workshops, the National SEED Project, and training offered by organizations like Race Forward and Facing History and Ourselves.

How can schools implement effective anti-racism training for their staff?

Schools can implement effective training by engaging experienced facilitators, ensuring ongoing professional development, fostering open dialogue, integrating training into school culture, and evaluating the impact regularly.

Can anti-racism training help teachers address their own biases?

Yes, one of the goals of anti-racism training is to help teachers identify and confront their own implicit biases, which can otherwise negatively affect their interactions with students and classroom decisions.

What challenges do teachers face when participating in anti-racism training?

Challenges include discomfort discussing race, resistance to change, lack of administrative support, time constraints, and the need for continual learning rather than one-time sessions.

How has the demand for anti-racism training for teachers changed recently?

Demand for anti-racism training has increased significantly in recent years due to heightened awareness of racial injustices, social movements, and a growing commitment to equity in education.

Anti Racism Training for Teachers: A Critical Tool for Inclusive Education

Anti racism training for teachers has emerged as an essential component in addressing systemic inequities within educational settings. As schools across the globe become increasingly diverse, educators face the challenge of fostering inclusive environments that recognize and respect all students' identities. This training aims to equip teachers with the skills, awareness, and knowledge required to identify, challenge, and dismantle racial biases and discriminatory practices within classrooms and school cultures.

The growing demand for anti racism training reflects broader societal efforts to confront racial injustice. However, the implementation and effectiveness of such programs vary widely, warranting a closer examination of their frameworks, outcomes, and challenges.

The Importance of Anti Racism Training for Educators

The role of teachers extends beyond delivering curriculum content; they shape students' social experiences and perceptions of fairness and belonging. Research consistently shows that implicit biases can influence teacher expectations and interactions, often to the detriment of students from marginalized racial and ethnic groups. For instance, a 2019 study published in the Journal of Educational Psychology found that teachers with unconscious racial biases were more likely to discipline Black students more harshly compared to their white peers.

Anti racism training for teachers addresses these disparities by promoting self-reflection and cultural competence. By understanding the historical and social contexts of racism, educators can better recognize systemic barriers affecting their students. This awareness is critical in dismantling practices that perpetuate inequality, such as biased disciplinary actions or Eurocentric curricula.

Key Components of Effective Anti Racism Training

Effective programs typically incorporate several core elements designed to foster meaningful change:

- Historical Contextualization: Providing a comprehensive overview of racial history and systemic oppression helps educators understand the roots of contemporary disparities.
- Implicit Bias Recognition: Tools and assessments that reveal unconscious attitudes allow teachers to identify personal prejudices.
- Culturally Responsive Pedagogy: Training on adapting teaching methods to honor diverse cultural backgrounds enhances student engagement and achievement.
- Practical Strategies: Offering actionable approaches for classroom management, curriculum diversification, and inclusive communication.
- Ongoing Reflection and Support: Establishing continuous professional development and peer collaboration to sustain anti-racist practices.

These components collectively aim to transform educators' perspectives and instructional approaches, promoting equity in schooling.

Evaluating the Impact of Anti Racism Training on Teaching Practices

Assessing the effectiveness of anti racism training remains complex due to the nuanced and deeply ingrained nature of racial attitudes. However, several studies provide insight into its potential benefits and limitations.

Positive Outcomes

One notable benefit is increased teacher self-awareness. Post-training evaluations often reveal that educators report greater recognition of their own biases and a heightened commitment to equitable teaching. For example, a 2021 survey conducted by the National Education Association indicated that 78% of participating teachers felt better prepared to handle racial issues in the classroom after completing anti racism workshops.

Additionally, schools that have integrated such training into their professional development plans have sometimes observed shifts in school climate metrics, including reductions in disciplinary disparities and improvements in student-teacher relationships across racial lines.

Challenges and Criticisms

Despite these gains, anti racism training faces criticism, particularly regarding its depth and sustainability. Some programs are criticized for being overly theoretical without providing sufficient practical application. Others question whether short-term workshops can produce lasting changes in attitudes and behaviors.

Moreover, resistance from educators or institutional constraints may hinder the adoption of anti-racist practices. A 2022 report by the Education Trust revealed that nearly 40% of teachers expressed discomfort or skepticism about discussing race openly in their classrooms, highlighting the need for supportive environments that foster honest dialogue.

Comparing Different Models of Anti Racism Professional Development

Anti racism training for teachers can take multiple formats, each with distinct advantages and drawbacks.

Workshop-Based Training

These are typically short-term, intensive sessions focusing on foundational knowledge and reflection exercises. Workshops are cost-effective and accessible but may lack follow-up support, limiting long-term impact.

Embedded Curriculum Integration

Some districts opt to embed anti-racist principles within existing curricula and teacher evaluations. This model promotes continuous engagement and aligns anti-racism with broader educational goals but requires significant systemic commitment and resources.

Peer-Led Collaborative Models

Peer coaching and collaborative inquiry groups allow educators to learn from one another's experiences and develop context-specific strategies. This approach fosters community and accountability but depends on strong leadership and willingness among participants.

Best Practices for Implementing Anti Racism Training in Schools

Successful integration of anti racism training involves a multi-faceted approach:

1. Leadership Commitment: School administrators must prioritize equity and allocate resources to ongoing training initiatives.
2. Inclusive Planning: Involving diverse stakeholders—including teachers, students, families, and community members—in program design ensures relevance and buy-in.
3. Customization: Tailoring training to the specific demographics, histories, and challenges of each school community enhances effectiveness.
4. Accountability Measures: Setting clear goals and monitoring progress helps maintain momentum and measure outcomes.
5. Safe Spaces for Dialogue: Creating environments where teachers can openly discuss challenges and biases encourages honest reflection and growth.

These strategies contribute to embedding anti-racist principles into the fabric of educational practice rather than treating them as isolated initiatives.

The Role of Policy and Funding

Governmental and institutional policies play a pivotal role in normalizing anti racism training for teachers. Several states in the U.S., for example, have introduced mandates requiring equity and diversity education as part of teacher certification. Funding allocations dedicated to professional development further facilitate access to high-quality training programs.

However, uneven policy implementation and political debates over the content and framing of anti racism education can create barriers. Navigating these challenges requires transparency, evidence-based approaches, and inclusive dialogue among educational stakeholders.

Looking Ahead: The Future of Anti Racism Training for

Teachers

As awareness of racial inequities in education continues to grow, anti racism training for teachers is likely to become an increasingly standard component of professional development. Emerging trends include the integration of digital platforms to provide scalable, interactive learning experiences and the use of data analytics to tailor training to individual educator needs.

Moreover, the movement toward restorative justice practices and trauma-informed education aligns closely with anti-racist frameworks, suggesting a holistic approach to supporting marginalized students.

Ultimately, while no single training program offers a panacea, anti racism training for teachers represents a vital step toward creating educational environments where all students can thrive. The ongoing challenge lies in ensuring these initiatives are thoughtfully implemented, adequately supported, and continuously refined in response to evolving needs.

anti racism training for teachers: The Realization of Anti-Racist Teaching Godfrey L. Brandt, 2022-02-14 First published in 1986, The Realization of Anti-Racist Teaching explores the subject and importance of anti-racist education. The book examines the relationship between the educational debate at the level of academic institutions, professional organisations, and local education authorities within the context of the actual practice of teaching. It also questions how to link anti-racist theories put forward by theorists and activists to the practice of teachers. The Realization of Anti-Racist Teaching is a detailed discussion of the history of racism and of anti-racist teaching and education.

anti racism training for teachers: Teaching/learning Anti-racism Louise Derman-Sparks, Carol Brunson Phillips, 1997-07-16 Louise Derman-Sparks and Carol Brunson Phillips have been teaching anti-racism to adults for over 20 years. Based on their real classroom experience, Teaching/Learning Anti-Racism offers us a guide to the development of anti-racist identity, awareness, and behaviour. By integrating methodology and course content descriptions with student writings and analyses of students' growth, the book highlights the interaction between teaching and learning. Organized chronologically from the first to the last class, the text describes how each session contributed to the students' fascinating journey from pro-racist consciousness to active anti-racism. This volume is much more than a curriculum guide for implementing anti-racism education with adults. Here, the authors, one White and one African American, also share their experiences, the successes, the failures, the difficulties, and, most important, what they learned from their students.

anti racism training for teachers: Enacting Anti-Racist and Activist Pedagogies in Teacher Education Canadian Perspectives Ardavan Eizadirad, Zuhra Abawi, Andrew B.

Campbell, 2023-06-30 Enacting Anti-Racist and Activist Pedagogies in Teacher Education is a timely edited collection that examines the complexities, challenges, spaces of resistance, and possibilities when faculty—specifically Black, Indigenous, and racialized faculty—advocate and implement anti racism approaches and pedagogies in Canadian teacher education programs. Taking an explicitly critical anti-racist approach, the text challenges the pedagogical, curricular, structural, and institutional underpinnings in teacher education framed by whiteness. As a collective, the chapters explore how to disrupt white normalcy by dismantling the hierarchies in place and unpacking intersectionalities, positionalities, and knowledge production through transformative anti-racist pedagogies. Established and emerging academics, as well as field practitioners, present a holistic and nuanced understanding of anti-racism within the educational context and seek to reframe teacher education through resistance and activism, preparing teacher candidates as practitioners for anti-racist work with racialized students, families, and communities. Including key terms, discussion questions, and “toolbox” sections highlighting advice for pre-service K-12 teachers, this text is an essential resource for undergraduate and graduate students in teacher education.

anti racism training for teachers: Preparing White Teachers for Anti-Racist Education

Katrina Liu, Michael K. Thomas, Richard Miller, 2024-12-22 Using a framework combining Critical Race Theory and Critical Reflection and Generativity for Transformative Praxis, this book examines both how white preservice teachers conceive of race and racism (habits of mind) and how they react when dealing with race and racism in the classroom (patterns of acting). With firm grounding in real-world data, the authors detail ways in which teacher educators can recognize and deal with preservice teachers who cannot—or will not—translate their reflections on race into actions against racism.

anti racism training for teachers: Handbook of Anti-Discriminatory Education

Ardavan Eizadirad, Peter Pericles Trifonas, 2025-05-29 This comprehensive handbook addresses issues related to anti-discriminatory education as it relates to children, youth, young adults, families, and practitioners across a series of age groups, sectors, communities, and countries. It seeks to map a holistic interdisciplinary overview of the field examining how policies, practices, and initiatives within unique social, political, and cultural contexts have been enacted to advance anti-discriminatory education for improved equity, diversity, and inclusion outcomes leading to thriving school-community ecosystems. The work draws on a range of theoretical frameworks, hybrid perspectives, and research projects to provide multiple examples about the challenges, complexities, and nuances involved in theorizing and doing the work of anti-discriminatory education in local communities and on a macro institutional level. With intentionality, authors from various backgrounds, identities, fields, and positionalities describe and discuss various social justice and equity issues and how they strategize, mobilize, and navigate unique micro and macro dynamics affiliated with power and privilege for the purpose of advancing the field of anti-discriminatory education. Overall, the chapters cover a range of topics and issues from various practitioners and community perspectives around the intersectionality and divergence of navigating micro lived experiences and macro institutional policies and practices to bridge the gap between theory and action with respect to anti-discriminatory education. The book is divided into 4 sub-sections: Early Childhood Education (Early years up to approx. 10 years old), Elementary and Middle School Years (approx. 11 to 14 years old), Secondary Schools (approx. 15 to 19 years old), and Higher Education (Post-Secondary).

anti racism training for teachers: Creating an Anti-Racist Curriculum for Children with Special Educational Needs Priya Bhagrath, 2025-05-30 This thought-provoking and experience-led book guides teachers and leaders to create anti-racist practices and to develop a curriculum for children with SEND, promoting cultural representation and giving all pupils a voice and a sense of belonging. Informative and practical chapters challenge the reader to review their whole school system and policies, taking them on a step-by-step journey through three main parts. The book enables educators to understand how this work can be meaningfully applied when working with

SEND pupils and families in all settings, with topics covered including: exploring what an anti-racist curriculum is and why it's needed for pupils with SEND establishing buy-in from school staff and meaningful support from key stakeholders creating an action plan and establishing accountability providing opportunities for high-quality CPD for all stakeholders how to create a cultural calendar and curriculum offer of representation developing whole school practices to link to home and the community preparing pupils for life beyond school. Pupils with SEND can access complicated topics if the subject matter is presented in a way that makes sense to them, with purpose, clarity and relevance to their lives. This book provides essential content and guidance for professionals to follow and implement for the benefit of SEND pupils and will be key reading for educators working in mainstream education, additional resource provisions, SMEH provisions and special schools.

anti racism training for teachers: Becoming an Antiracist School Leader Patrick A. anti racism training for teachers: Critical Race Theory and Classroom Practice Daniella Ann Cook, Nathaniel Bryan, 2024-05-03 This edited book shows how critical race theory (CRT) can shape teacher practices in ways that improve educational outcomes for all children, especially those most marginalized in PreK-20 classrooms. The volume bridges the gap between the theoretical foundations of critical race theory and its application in formal and informal learning environments. To promote an active and interdisciplinary engagement of critical race praxis, it illuminates the pedagogical possibilities of using CRT while explicitly addressing grade span-specific content area standards and skills. Each chapter explores how educators use a critical race theory lens to deepen student learning, teach honestly about racism and white supremacy, and actively prepare learners to equitably participate in a multiracial democracy. Written for pre- and in-service teachers, teacher educators, and anti-racist community stakeholders, the text addresses the applicability of CRT as a pedagogical practice for PreK-20 educators seeking to meaningfully combat intersectional racial injustice and to create a more just democracy. This book is necessary reading for educators, and courses in Educational Foundations, Anti-Racist Education, Social Justice Education, Curriculum Studies, Educational Leadership, and Multicultural Education.

anti racism training for teachers: Creating Caring and Supportive Educational Environments for Meaningful Learning Daniels, Kisha, Billingsley, Katrina, 2018-09-14 This title is an IGI Global Core Reference for 2019 as it is edited by leading education scholars from Duke University and contributed by over 22 leading education scholars from the U.S., this publication provides the latest research on creating a well-rounded education system through blending technical and "human" aspects of learning. With comprehensive coverage on fostering relationships, multicultural responsive learning, parent engagement, and more, this book is ideally designed for teachers, administrators, researchers, and academicians. Creating Caring and Supportive Educational Environments for Meaningful Learning is a collection of innovative research on the practical and theoretical questions involved in organizing traditional and nontraditional areas of study around themes of care and support for students within the framework of current educational systems and standards. While highlighting topics including service learning, ethics of care, and student mental health, this book is ideally designed for teachers, administrators, researchers, and academicians seeking current research on the importance and ethics of the human aspects of education.

anti racism training for teachers: Unthinkable Laughter Laura Mae Lindo, 2025-04-30 Does anti-racist education need to rely so heavily on feelings of anxiety, anger, or guilt? Can comedy, and more specifically, African American "race comics," help us rethink our approach to anti-racist education? At a time when critical race theory is under attack, the need for new approaches to anti-racist education is urgent. Unthinkable Laughter addresses this need, highlighting the power of humour and race comedy as valuable alternative strategies. Drawing on her experiences in politics – as a former member of Provincial Parliament in Ontario, anti-racism critic for the province, and chair of Ontario’s first-ever Black Caucus – Laura Mae Lindo offers a fresh perspective on rethinking anti-racism work in educational settings. The book applies critical race theory and culturally relevant pedagogies to Canadian experiences in education and politics, addressing a significant representational gap that often fosters the misleading belief that racism in education is a problem unique to the United States. By introducing this theoretical framework to Canadian contexts, Lindo offers a more inclusive, global perspective on both critical race theory and culturally relevant pedagogies in education. Ultimately, Unthinkable Laughter calls for a shift in how we approach anti-racist education, urging the exploration of humour and race comedy as powerful and effective alternative strategies.

anti racism training for teachers: Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion in Rehabilitation Sciences Adria Quigley, Hellen Myezwa, Caitlin McArthur, 2023-12-12 The impact of race, sex, gender, disability, and socioeconomic status on health and quality of life has been well established. Now, perhaps more than ever, there is a demand for equitable and timely access to rehabilitation. Incorporating principles of equity, diversity, inclusion, and accessibility into clinical practice and research is essential for addressing the unique needs of rehabilitation clients. There is also a need to critically examine the integration of anti-oppressive and anti-racist frameworks into rehabilitation care. Strategies that promote accessible and affordable participation, health promotion, technology, and interdisciplinary collaboration in rehabilitation are also needed. The impact of gender, sexual orientation, race and religion, and socioeconomic status on rehabilitation service delivery and outcomes is less well known. Within the context of rehabilitation science, we need to understand these differences and illuminate how to better serve equity-deserving groups.

anti racism training for teachers: Freedom Teaching Matthew Kincaid, 2024-01-18 Build an anti-racist and culturally responsive school environment In Freedom Teaching, educator and distinguished anti-racism practitioner Matthew Kincaid delivers a one-stop resource for educators and educational leaders seeking to improve equity and increase the cultural responsiveness of their school. In this book, you’ll discover the meaning and fundamentals of anti-racist education and find a roadmap to reducing the impact of systemic racism in your classroom. The author offers skills and tools he’s developed over the course of his lengthy career teaching anti-racist ideas to educators, providing readers with strategies that are effective at both the individual teacher and collective school community level. Readers will also find: ● A thorough introduction to the idea of Freedom Teaching and creating an education system that works for all students ● Strategies for building and maintaining anti-racist schools and classrooms ● Important social justice lessons from unsung activists An indispensable resource for educators, educational leaders, and anyone who wants to actualize change in our education system, Freedom Teaching belongs in the libraries of the parents and families of students and teachers in training hoping for a better understanding on anti-racist concepts and ideas.

anti racism training for teachers: Reconceptualizing Social Justice in Teacher Education Susan Browne, Gaëtane Jean-Marie, 2022-11-28 This edited volume explores and extends themes in contemporary educational research on teacher preparation and the evolution in social justice education to antiracist pedagogy. These times call for teacher education to reconsider how the work devoted to social justice is explicit and intentional about its commitment to a racially just society. What does it mean for teacher education to seize this moment to confront racism and inequities that continue to perpetuate in society and school? The book highlights efforts that are being augmented to prepare teacher candidates and future faculty to address systemic racism in their teaching practices.

anti racism training for teachers: Currere from Apartheid to Inclusion Shani Steyn, 2024-06-14 This volume demonstrates the instrumental use of Currere as a methodology to bring about Deracialisation through transformational learning by a white educator in Post-Apartheid South Africa. Offering an honest and vulnerable recognition of privilege and exclusivity, it disrupts deep-seated racial bias and assumptions, unveils racial blind spots, and confronts the discourse that South African white educators are, overtly or covertly, perpetuating systemic racism within schools. Based on autoethnographic analyses of the author's lived educational experiences within the Apartheid regime, it uses the theoretical concepts of Currere to initiate her journey towards Deracialisation and transform her current pedagogical practice. In doing so, the book demonstrates how critical self-examination of underlying beliefs that lead to actions, and how the past – in this case, being born, raised, and educated within the Apartheid era – can influence one's teaching in ways that harm the educational development of culturally diverse learners. Grappling with how autoethnographical experiences in a specific setting can inform current pedagogy, and be used to bring about professional and personal transformation, this book will be of interest to scholars, postgraduate students, and educational researchers with interests in curriculum theory, race and education, transformative learning, Deracialisation, and autoethnography.

anti racism training for teachers: Teacher Education in Plural Societies (RLE Edu N) Maurice Craft, 2012-04-27 The educational implications of cultural pluralism attracted a good deal of attention in Western societies in the 1970s and 1980s, on the grounds of equality and human rights, maximising national talent, and maintaining social cohesion. Maurice Craft and the international contributors to this book highlight the potential of teacher education, and in this wide-ranging analytical review for its key role in providing for ethnic minority children, in respect of access and achievements, and also for all children to acquire informed and tolerant attitudes. This book makes an important contribution to a small but growing literature, concentrating on initial rather than in-service teacher education, and it brings together papers from experienced specialists from eleven countries worldwide: Australia, Britain, Canada, Israel, Malaysia, Northern Ireland, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, The Netherlands and the USA. The papers are concerned with the needs both of diverse classrooms and diverse societies, and also consider general principles and comparative perspectives. Of interest to the specialist and non-specialist alike, Teacher Education in Plural Societies: An International Review deals with an important and timely issue – how best to prepare teachers to meet the needs of both minority – and majority – culture pupils who are growing up in plural societies.

anti racism training for teachers: The Poetics of Anti-racism Meredith Lordan, 2006 The sense of white entitlement is seen through discourses of what about us when issues of race and equity are raised in the classrooms of the dominant. Even when race issues are grudgingly acknowledged there is the politics of moral distancing apparent in the dominant body playing the race card through evocations of merit, excellence and meritocracy. This book extends the discussion of anti-racism to highlight linguistic racism and, more specifically, the centrality of language in the discourse and poetics of anti-racism. The contributors discuss how language is used and how, especially in that usage, race and racism are expressed in everyday practice. The authors invite us to join the journey of real, meaningful change through the poetics of words and action, thereby giving voice to the possibilities of change. -- Back cover.

anti racism training for teachers: Race Relations and Urban Education Peter David Pumfrey, Gajendra K. Verma, 1990 A presentation of a radical but systematic approach to the study of some of the educational problems and issues which ethnic minority children and adolescents face within the context of urban schooling as we move into the 1990s.

anti racism training for teachers: State of Transition Clive Harber, 2001-01-01 The main purpose of this book is to provide a concise overview of educational transition - to document, discuss and analyse key changes (and continuities) in South African education since the end of apartheid. What makes this period particularly fascinating for educationalists is that the legacy of apartheid and the years of international isolation meant that educational reform had to be fundamental and wide ranging if South Africa was to become a modern, democratic state participating in the global political economy of the twenty-first century. The result was that in the final five years of the twentieth century South Africa became something of a laboratory or crucible for educational innovation. From 1948 to the early 1990s South African government was based on an institutionalised system of 'racial' separation and inequality formally known as apartheid. A white minority dominated a black majority in a context of stark social, political and economic differentiation. While the apartheid state used force to maintain this system, formal education was also used to try to make the basic tenets of apartheid 'normal' and 'acceptable' in the minds of South Africans. From the apartheid government's point of view, the role of education was to help to perpetuate and reproduce a racist system and to encourage obedience and conformity to that system. It is not therefore surprising that in the 1970s and 1980s education also became a key site in the struggle against apartheid or that educational reform was high on the agenda of the first democratically elected government after April 1994. However, while the direction of educational reform has inevitably been strongly influenced by the nature and history of the anti-apartheid struggle inside South Africa, the global political and economic context has also played its part in shaping educational debate and policy outside South Africa. Clive Harber's book recognises that there is a difference between planned reform and the actual nature of educational change on the ground and tries, where possible, to set reform in the contextual realities of South African education as they presently exist. It aims to understand the difficulties and ambiguities of transition as well as the overt aims and goals as enshrined in policy documents and legislation.
